

What is the role of love and caring in human freedom and other aspects of human agency, including our capacities to value, to make choices, and to motivate ourselves to act? We will bring together philosophers, psychologists, and anthropologists to address these and other questions.

LOVE AND HUMAN AGENCY

FRIDAY, SEPT. 19

4:30 P.M.

The Importance of Love

Susan Wolf, Edna J. Koury Professor of Philosophy, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill
Comments by Alan Fiske, Professor of Anthropology, UCLA

SATURDAY, SEPT. 20

9 A.M.

Love, Empathy, Wisdom, and Justice

Barry Schwartz, the Dorwin Cartwright Professor of Social Theory and Social Action, Swarthmore College
Comments by Gary Watson, Provost Professor of Philosophy and Law, USC

11:10 A.M.

Being Moved

Julien Deonna, Assistant Professor of Philosophy, University of Geneva
Comments by Jennifer Beer, Associate Professor of Psychology, University of Texas, Austin

3 P.M.

Wide Process Enkrateia: How to Revise One's Best Judgment in Light of Love

Sabine Döring, Professor of Philosophy, Universität Tübingen
Comments by Michael Anderson, Associate Professor of Psychology, Franklin & Marshall College

5:10 P.M.

Caring Lives, Redemptive Life Stories

Dan McAdams, Professor of Psychology, Northwestern University
Comments by Andrea Westlund, Associate Professor of Philosophy, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee

Registration is required but free. You can register online at <http://www.loveandhumanagency.org/conference-on-love-and-human-agency/> or by calling Nicole Hoover at (717) 291-3917. All events are held in the Bonchek Lecture Hall in the Ann & Richard Barshinger Life Sciences and Philosophy Building

FRANKLIN & MARSHALL COLLEGE

Sponsors: The John Templeton Foundation, the Department of Philosophy, the Scientific and Philosophical Studies of Mind program, and an anonymous donor

THIS POSTER CREATED BY THE FRANKLIN & MARSHALL OFFICE OF COMMUNICATIONS